I propose, with your leave, to recall to the feld, and e fecially what has occurred with o serve the interests of the country since I leften a year ago last November, called by the artill kindness of the Pre-ident to take command of the Department of Virginia and North relina. > The best movement of the Army of the James, except that of the 27th of October, when it made a demonstration toward Richmond for the purpose of holding the enemy in their trenches while the Army of the Potomae attempted to turn their left at Hatcher's Run, was that while has caused some little discussion tested, what would be the effect of the ex-losion of a large quantity of powder in the helphorhood of a fortification, to see whether t would have the destructive effect which twas claimed by some it would, have, or whether it would result in comparative farmlessness. General Grant determined o send three thousand men in aid of the ried off his forces to meet Slierman, and, therefore, the fort would be found undefended by any considerable force. Gen. Grant also hoped that protion of the fleet would run by the fort into Cape Fear river, and then, by landing the troops, and Intrenching across the Peninsula, between the river and the sea, blockade-running at least might be stopped. It was said that there was not sufficient depth of water to go up the river, but as since the fort has Indeed been silenced, there seems to have been no considerable difficulty in getting most of tha gunboats up the river. I am inclined to the opinion that it was snother want, rather than the want of water, that prevented the gunboats from going np the river by the forts while they were in possession of the enemy. Farragut was not there.

in another, that we sailed too soon: and again, in another despatch—for they seem to be truitful of despatches—that the powder-hoat was prepared by me, and that we waited for it. Fellow-citizens, I have lived with you, man and boy, for thirty years, and I am going to live with you, if you will have me, for thirty years longer. [Great applause.] I have stood before you many times, and I hope to stand before you many times more, to advise with you upon that which is for the good of the country; but, often as I have met you here, no man can say that I ever misrepresented a fact, and when I tell you that I uever saw that powder-loat, that all I had to do with It was to order my ordnance officer to turn over to the navy ed Fineser, who commanded the naval force, hal not fallen in the first attack, their ram would not have controlled the river, and the result might not have happened. Another considera-ble event was the evacuation of Washington, N. C., in April. This was done under the or-ders of the Lieutenant-General, with entire deliberation, without attack, and every dullar's worth of Government property brought away, and the forces holding it taken as a part of the movelule columns of the Army of the Liberature. and the forces holding it taken as a part of the movable column of the Army of the James. I should hardly have mentioned this evacuation, had I not been the subject of animadversion, and to show that whatever was done was done under explicit orders. Of the propriety of this evacuation, however strong an opinion I might have in its favor. I am not at liberty to speak, for the reasons I have before given you. On the 1st of April last, two large armies lay lace to face, of josed to each other, on the Rapid Ann. my ordinance officer to turn over to the navy one hundred and fifty (150) tons of powder, and that the whole thing was under the charge of the navy, and was arranged exactly as the nav-desired, when they wished and how they wished let of April last, two large armies lay tace to face, opposed to each other, on the Rapid Ann. A small army of about 18 000 m n, 6,00 of whom were negroes, lay lu and around Fortress Monnee. Twenty thousand men were ordered from the Department of the South to join that little army. Looking over the whole field, it seemed to me to be the part of wis lom to move then army upon Bernuda Handred, and escalishing there a base for operation as strong and as a silv beyond as Fortress Monroe; a base not to be interfared with or lost while the war lasted; and where an army lies with 18 hand out can judge of the truth of the de-patch which tates that I proposed the powder-boat. Whover states it, there is no truth in it. But the owder-boat, it is said, was a failure. Gre s the powder in it pever was wholly s re. It was intended that there should be fire. It was intended that there should be then exploded more powder than ever was exploded before. Powder eneugh, in my judgment, to have done very great damage, so much, in bet, that I have the written advice of Admiral Porter that I should stand out twenty-tive miles, let off the steam, and draw the fire from the boiler of my boat before it went off, lest the explosion should blow me up even there. [Laughter and applanse.] That saggestion, I say, I have in writing, yet Porter would intimate I had too much faith in the efficacy of the powder-boat, and that he had no belief in its effect. Certainly, it is admitted that he got his fleet so far away from the scene of the explosion that for that or some other that he got his fleet so far away from the scene of the explosion that for that or some other reason he could not get back again under ten (10) hours thereafter to fire the first shot at the lort after the powder-boat exploded. There was a very large quantity of powder, and I am still confident that if it had gone off it would have done great damage. It was intended to place it in bags, with fuses running all through it, so that it might be instantaneously exploded in every part. But how was it done? The clock-work, the candles, the fuses, everything prepared to lemite it tailed, and the only way that It was got off at all was to set fire to the ship at the bow and let it hurn up to one end of the mass of powder, the explosion of which sett the other part into the water without belong burst; so that, on my belief, not more than one-tenth of the powder on board even old burn, making an explosion indeed, which is described as hardly more han would have been telt from a 15-luch gun. but within therety-four hours that army was within twelve miles of Richmond, where it has held its position ever-since—a position to which it advanced without the shedding of a drop of blood. On the same day the Army of the Potomac, under the command of General Meade, more than a hundred thousand strong, started from the Rapid Ann, also toward Richmond. that the Intention with which that army set James river, get around the city on the south ide, and thus cut it off. Now, perhaps, you can meterstand what may have slightly puzzled you here efore, why the Army of the James was den of traiting toward Brury's Bluff, on the 15th off May, while the Army of the Potomac was coming down from the Ra id Ann on the north side toward Richmond. But the Army of the Potomac as a over Bichmond, on the south side. Indeed, there was no call for the Army of the James above Richmond, on the south side. Indeed, there was no call for the Army of the James above Richmond, if the Army of the James above Richmond is a ster. We held the lines that we took up from the Appointance to the James and we hold them to this day—the advanced lines of all the armies operating against Richmond. Renewed applause.]

Such heing the plan, why explode the powder when the army was sixty-five miles off? Again, the time for the explosion was to be so chosen that if it paralyzes the men or did any demage to the works, in glat be promptly taken advantage of by landing the army and an attack by the navy; why then, blow up the powder at one o'clock a night, yet foil to the even the first gun from the provential maken wheely not don't have sight.

the armies operating upon Petersburg to this day. The strongest of these works was captured by a skirmish line of negro solders, and no troops have advanced a step beyond their position in that direction, after seven months of siege. WHY GEN, BUTLER WENT WITH THE EXPEDITION. Again, it was said that I was not to go that the department under my command was the Department of Virginia and North Car-olina, and that the operations were within my Department, and so I had a right to go. But I seem all subterfuge or indirection. I accompanied the expedition with the full knowledge and consent of Gen. Graut, verbally given. Nay, more, if you will examine his orders for the expedition to me, you will see that be says: "The execution of the details of this order is intrusted to you and the subordinate officers of your company not to subordinate officers of your command, not to Geu. Weitzel alone." Still further, as I have said, Lieut.-Col. Constock, Engineer of Gen. Graut's Staff, was by himself in person detailed to go with me upon that expedition, and left Gen. Grant's headquarters has Gen. Grant infilmated to me that he did not expect me to accompany the expedition, or chide re for going with it. And last of all, on the 20th day of December, while I lay in Beaufort harbor, as commander of the expedition, I sent a report of progress to Gen. Grant, which he letwarded to Washington, without aword of dissent, that I was not the duly authorized commander of the expedition. The first intination from any quarter that I ever had that I was not properly there was when I read in the New-York Herald, an indorsement upon my official report, which indorsement is in the handwriting of a staff officer of Gen. Grant, and was not filed in the War Office till seven days after Gen. Grant's letter to the President, asking for my relief upon other grounds than any action of mine in regard to the Wilmington expedition, but which reasons I am not permitted to state to you, and live days after my farewell order to the Army of the James, the context of whitch may have been misunderstood, and, possiorder to the Army of the James, the context of which may have been misunderstood, and, possibly, given offeuce. Beelde, what was done there, was exactly what Gen, Weitzel advised. Why was it worse for me to do what Gen. Weitzel advised and thought right to be done, than it would have been for him to do the same thing himself if he had been there alone? Answer me this, and I will take the biame. Now, let us see what it is to assault a fort. Let us see what the commanding General and Admiral has to do in such a case. At Fort Fisher the Admiral was on beauthly yessel. I was on mine, quite ever since, I would do so agala. If He would give me strength in answer to my praver, "Lead me not into tempation," to act according to the dictates of my conscience and indement, for there was every temptation to make the assault at Fort Fisher, and thus take the chance to win honor and glory at sacrifice of my men, and none to forbear to make it and come away. [Great cheering.] But some gentleman my say, why, having determined not to make the assault, did you not stay there and intrench? For three reasons. Let us examine them in a few minutes. But first bear in mind that I have not gone into the newspapers in explanation of this subject, I have not been porter or reporter of it again and again. [Laughter [No, I have come home here to my neighbors, whose hands I have to take in friendship, with whom I must I ve, whose children are to grow up with mine, and here I make the explinations that I have to make, then caring not a rappec what is thought of the matter elsewhere. I have encountered worse storms than this before, and have lived through them, and I shall live through this also. ever since, I would do so agala. If He would worse storms than this octore, and have live through them, and I shall live through this also [Good, good, and cheers.] Now, then, who did I not lay upon the beach? In the firplace, I had made only a partial landing of one third of ur, incu, and none of my artillery. The sea arose so high that no more men or gun, ceuld be landed; and you will see that the rebel General Whiting, in his report, states that agreet storm earner up that night, which kinns a great storm came up that night, which inju-tis garrison very much, the garrison being a ler arms all night to meet our upproach, jut ou shore 2,260 men, and eight hours aft put ou shore 2,200 men, and eight hours afterwards the storm was so severe that I could not get a gun or even a box of bread on shore, except by heading the latter up tight in a cask and sending it ashore on a raft. Again, if you will look in one of Admiral Porter's last reports, you will see that he saws, "baving expended in the bourbardment almost the last shot and shell which I had with me I found it necessary to go back to Beanlout to set a new supply." I should with the I found it necessary to go back to Beaufort to get a new supply." I should have looked very well, would I not, planting myself upon that beach with a handful of men, with a body of the enemy behind me (Hoke's division from Richmond) larger than my whole 'painted skip upon a paint docean." It tool Admiral Porter until the 11th of Januar eighteen days) to get back from Beaufort with his new supply of amnultion, and if my troops had stayed there and waited for him what do you supplose would have happened to us during the time that he was away? But, again, if nothing was to be gained by it, what was the use of staying there at all and hazarde gimy men? I had no sleege train, yet Lieut. Gim. Grant argues that my preparations and instructions were all correct. I could not besiege the fort. I had only twelve light guns, and I had seventeen leave gans bearing upon me from the fort; therefore I could not besiege. What, then, could I de? Perhops you will say that I might have stayed there and tried to stop up the river, by opening my guns upon blockade runners as they passed up and down the river, and I know it seems so from the maj; but there was a mile and a balf of much between me and the river, and, notwithstanding all that I could have done, the enemy could have reinforced and provisioned Fort Fisher at pleasure, and landed men all sides of me, and the blockade-runners could have passed backward and forward almost as freely as the rebel rams passed up and down the James river the other day in spite of the navy. [Langhter.] Whit else could have done, The fact is, I saw that at any time when there was a smooth sea a landing could be lauded again? The fact is, I saw that at any time when there was a smooth sea a landing could be easily effected under cover of the runs of the navy. is new supply of amn witton, and if my troop ad stayed there and waited for him what do you again? The fact is, I saw that at any time when there was a smooth sena landing could be easily effected under cover of the guns of the navy, and you remember that Gen. Terry lauded his troops without the loss of a man. What, then, was the use of my staving there? There was none. But, besides, Hoke's division was there—I captured sixty-live of them—and, if I had stayed there, I would have been exposed to an overwhelming attack, and lost my men without benefit to the service. Besides, hy staving there, I only kept the enemy there: by going away, the enemy went away, supposing the attack to be abar doned; and thus we found no sufficient lone to oppose General Terry. orce to oppose General Terry

NIVS FROM THE PLAINS-INLINY M' RDERS, A coach with Denver City dates arrived t Imaha on Tuesday of last week. Among th ascengers was Colonel Foster, who left Vicinia City on December 21th. From Deuver to ulesburg, nearly all the farms and stage station have been deserted. The Indians in th ir late depredations on the Platte burned two stage stations above Julesburg, called Atchion and Wiscousin. At the latter station was a large family, consisting of three women and six children, and it was supposed they were al murdered and burnt up in the building, as nothing remained to tell the horrib'e deed but the bones of the women and children. From Denver to Cottonwood Springs no hostile Indians were seen or heard of. All the ranges and stage stations have been plundered and tirned between the two places, and the only sign of habitation is the Indian trading pot, which the Indians dld not molest, as the traders

Major General Thomas is actively preparog for a new campaign. It has already been nnounced through the press that he has sent the main portion of his artitlery and Infantry to the East, retaining only a sufficiency for gared with mounted men for jurposes of facility. and to avoid the dangers and labors incident to he protection of an extensive line of commu. nications. The expedition of Gen. Thomas will doubtless move sonthward, obtaining the necessary provisions chiefly in the country through which it shall pass. Gen. Thomas has had considerable experience in commanding cavalry operations, and therefore he will not be at a loss in conducting the present enterprise. A correspondent of the Chicago Journal, writing from Nashville at a recent date, gives the ollowing outline of the new campaign:

Whenever the move does commence, it will have four objects in view: 1. The utter destruction of what remains of Hood's demoralized, disheartened, and dishearding army. 2. To open the Alabama river, from its mouth to its source, which involves the capture of Mobile, Stime and Montemery, and the destruction Selma, and Montgomery, and the destruction of the rebel iron-clade on the river. 3 The capture of Columbus, Georgia, and the destruction of all the machine shops there. 4 The complete destruction of the railroad through central Alabama, and the Mobile and Onio Railroad from Corinth southward.

of from Corinth southward. These labors will require a great deal of parching and but little fighting, and cavalry marching and but little fighting, and cavalry and mounted infantry alone are adapted to such a task, and they only will be employed.

The fragmentary army of Hood, which Gen. Thomas defeated so disastrously in front of bis southward march. The robel cavalry under Gen. Forrest will prove the most formidable obstacle. Forrest is a skilful leader, and his troops are well organized. Hood's army will doubtless retrains to Aberdeen, and, perhaps, attempt resistance there, or he away to a coordinate with the willow of the series of the University.

Perhaps, attempt resistance there, or he large depot of supplies has been obtilit, and where it large depot of supplies has been obtilit, and where it large depot of supplies has been obtilit, and where it large depot of supplies has been collected. In the against, to say a few words up on enterthe again upon his dut.

What he diston had I or up, led an ugst you?
Undenbtedly that of a Union man. In what way had I exhibited the sin erity of the opintiens: By contending in the Legislature, and over almost every hill and vale in the Sente, that the Union and the Constitution must and should be preserved at all has ards; by rai ing treads; by lighting on many a hard-fought buttte-field; by the hedding of my own blood, which consecrated my devotion to my country.
What more proof do you need? Wherein have I erree? What etime have I committed? What State or national law have I violated? What charges have been made against me? Noue charges have been made against me? Noue. Have I been confronted? No. Why no? Bacuse they know that I was innocent, and that not a shadow of a charge could be sustained. what was the character of my speeche? That the policy of the Administration was culculated to conscilidate the rebellion and divice the loval men of the country. What policy did I wish? That policy which, I steeredy believed, would consolidate the I wall men of the country and divide these in relieding. I wished the whole power of the arm is nentrated to everthrow those in arms, with a sijeal to the patrioth in of the people of the S ath not to tear down the work of our fathers. The of creme between the policy I supported and that of those who differed with me was ing that they were corre-? or by declasing the railed? The Southern people believed that their slave property was in danger by the election of a sectional President. How has the prove to a man that you do not intend to robbin by stealing all that he owns. But you are not an uncond tional Union man because you at slave property stand in your way.

That is not true. I will give every vestige of my property, and shed the last drop of millored, to preserve my country. It is not me ond the nal Union in to submit to unconditional wrotes. It is not unconditional wrotes, and the rights of property, the rights of personal liberty, the rights of free suffrage. But it is the notitional servility which submits to and concentrating power in the hands of a few?

No: so help us Almighty God, we will preserve not only this Union, but the late and the sout of it—the Constitution with all the great and inherent rights of Amer.

Here perhaps I should end, but I cannot forhear to touch upon the chief issues of the hear. In times like these it behoves every true citizen to stand up boldly for what he con-ceives to be the true interest of the country. One should blush at such limes to permit a and God, what is best, what will be best, for We have a written Constitution. It is our duty to obey that Instrument until it is set aside in opinions, and should maintain them, but we have no right as representatives of the people to thrust forward our individual opinions in dehar ce of the written law of the land, and in defiance of the rights, interests, and wishes of our constituents. But we have those opinions; what are we to do?—some will question. Submit always to the law of the land, altering that law constitutionally, if you think it wrong. But our consciences will not permit us to over cither the law or the great mass of our con-stituents. Then your consciences ought to force you to resign, until the law and the people respectfully, we should violate both law and the aboli hed. You strike down, and undermine che speeks of property, and you e, ally strike at all other kinds.

A few words in regard to the proposed change in the Constitution of the Februal Government. I am opposed to it. Because such a change is contary to the spirit of our caten of government, because if ever made it.

laces in the Union, and consequently the hange cannot be made constitutionally; but if hade, must be brought about by fraud and force. hade, must be brought about by fraud and force. It becomes also a wedge which divides us still more as a people, and makes it more difficult to settle our national troubles. This is really the crowning objection to the dauger. Let us wait, let us not create new cause of strife and make that caue irascible, but as patriots pour oil upon the troubled waters and work with one heart to unite our divided country, that one we may become a presuperse that once we may become a prosperous and happy people. We have had many triumphs to the national arms, let us as a magnanimons, great nation offer these deluded people, "boue of bone and lesh and of our liesh," casy terms. Let us offer a general amnesty, an abrogation of the confiscation laws, and the Constitution as it is. I do not know that the offer would be I do not know that the offer would be epted. It might result in an immediate.
At all events it would strengthen the u tional cause.

Set tors, unfortunatele, the Union party of this State has been divided in twain. I will not asy whose fault it is; bistory will decide that question. As your presiding ollicer, I will know no party in the chair, but will be guided in my decisions by earlty and the law.

I that k you for your attention, and hope soon that our hearts may be gliddened by the joying heat of peace, and that once more we may be a restant and manufactione that a restored hatton under one flag.

LOUISVILLE TH ATRE. -The Florences con e to be the attraction at this Theatre. To Vathleen Mayourneen or St. Patrick's Eve a new | lav, will be presented. It will introduce Mr and Mrs. Florence in some of thrir excellent characters. In other cities the play has been produced with great en ess, and no doubt it will meet with a flattering reception in

Wood's THE ATE -Edwin Adams, the young and eminent trapedian, commences an engagement at Wood's Theatre to-night, appearing as Hamlet in Shakespeare's great play of that name. Mr. Adams is an actor of great merit, and his renditions exhibit both culture and genius. He has many admirers in the city, and they will be on hand to welcome him to-night. Colonel E. Z. C. Judson, at one time hetter known as a writer of sensational stories, nder the nom de plume of "Ned B ntline," i about to start on a lecturing tour through the courtry. He has chosen for his theme "The Reality of the War." Col. Judson has been honorably discharged from the service on acc unt of disability from a wound. It may be matter of general interest to now, that, under the recent arrangement of the Secretary of the Treasury with Jay Cooke relative to the 7 30 bonds, subscriptions to that popular national loan are received by the United States dejositary in this city, at the customhouse. Mr. Gallagher is always "on hand"

during Lusiness hours. TABLEAUX.-The first exhibition of the tableaux and pantomimes for the benefit of the Widows' and Orphans' Home will take place to-night. The scenes have been prepared with excellent care, and no doubt the Masonie Temple will be transformed into a palace of fashion and beauty to-night. Let everybody go early. REFORME FAIR -The ladies will continue toht their Fair for the benefit of the refugees, the small hall of Masonic Temple. A large mber of valuable articles are to be raffled away, when a grand auction will take place. The occasion will be one of unusual interest.

SENATE. CORRECTION .- in Thursday's proceedings of the Seinte a serious error occurred through liadvertance on the part of the cepyist. The positions of both Mesers, Doolittle and Trumbull on the question of counting the Presidential electoral vetes of States in insurrection were thereby confounded. The following is the true version: Mr. Doolittle contended that Congress had no ght to decide this question; that it must be criced by the President of the Senate, as President of the joint convention in which the vote at nonneed.

Mr. Trumbull took issue with Mr. Doolittle Mr. Trinmbull took issue with Mr. Doolittle as to the manner in which the vote should be 200mted. He held that the President of the Senate dld not count the vote, but only announced the result when counted. Had we the right to exclude the vote of the Sixtes with whose people It was in violation of the laws of war to trade? The State of Louisiana was in retellien against the Government. If the dectrine contonded for by the opponents of the bill before the Senate were to prevail, and the actine contonded for by the opponents of the ill before the Senate were to prevail, and the car was to continue for four years, what is to inder the States in rebellion from electing the east President? Only eight thousand out of the thousand voters of Louisiana voted at the largest the state of the senate of ection of the Legislature.

The House passed the joint resolution to terminate the treaty with Great Britain for the regulation of the naval force on the Lakes.

The House resumed the consideration of the mayal atpropriation bill.

Mr. Woed opposed the pending amendment for the Board of Admiralty, and in the course of his remarks said that if, as reported, the peace negotiations had failed in consequence of the indisposition of the rebel authorities to return to thair allegiance and duty because they resolved to resolve the present of the resolution to the resolution of the rebel authorities to return to thair allegiance and duty because they resolved to remarks and the resolution of the resolution o to their allegiance and duty because they re-tured to reunite on the basis of the Constitu-tion, so far as he represented the peace senti-ment by would not sustain them in their position. If the door was thrown open by the President, and if the answer thereto was separa-tion and recegnition and nothing else, so fir as his Lumble efforts were concerned he should aid the conquering armies of his beloved country to obtain by force that peace which they had been unable to get by conciliation.

Mr. Baidwin offered the following:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.

Washington, Feb. I.
Much surprise was occasioned this morning by the early return of President Lincoln and Secretary Seward, and it was not long before many conflicting reports were circulated regarding the result of their mission. The antagonistic position of the two governments were known on the return of Mr. Blair in Richmond—one desiring peace on the basis of the Uulon and submission, and the other on the basis of separtate independence and recognition. It was clear e independence and recognition. It was clea at the rebels themselves did not anticipate ady compliance with their demand, while there was an carnest desire on the part of the President to do all that was compatible with honor and public expediency in promises, and who evinced not a little anxiety to induce accommodation.

It was briefly announced by telegraph this morning that President Lincoln and Secretary Seward had returned to Washington after a con-

Georgia Legislature, to meet on Wednesday

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.

Both houses of Congre have passed the joint resolution that the electoral votes of the States of Vinginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabana, Mississippi, Louislana, Texas, Arkansas, and Tennessee, shall not be counted next Wednesday, in the vote for President and Vice-President of the United States. This is passed on the ground that nore of them were in a condition to vote on the 8th of November last. the sth of November last.

The conversation was conducted in the most courteous and respectful manner, and the commissioners returned to blichmond thoroughly understanling the views expressed by the President. Therefore if anything further is to be said on this subject it must come from the Confederates themselves. As keretolore stated, there was no agreement As herecolore stated, there was no agreement upon any point at issue. It is asserted by the filends of the President that no concession or promise was made by him in the least degree, yielding the poelition as above stated, which he has in public and private conversations maintained. Whatever may be the speculations as to peace movements in the future, it is certain there will be no abstement of our military operations, but that efforts be made to proceed the war with additional vigor, so that our success may produce an early peace.

If the power of memory were denied us, would we be happy? Let I hilosof he a w .. for I cannot. Yet this fact is apparent, that memory is the Listorian of the world, the mammoth book in which all the virtues and all the faults of all the world are recorded. Each man's memory is his conscience, the monitor which reproves him for each false step taken. There are few persons who love to dwell too particularly upon the scenes of childhood. Let the prospect be ever so pleasing, black spots are on the canvas, and the eye, which beams one moment with pleasure, is dimmed the next with tears of repentance. My childhood was scarcely worthy the name. A father's smile, a mother's kiss I never knew. No sister caressed me or claimed my protection. Yet the clouds were neither dark or ominous. The bright sunshine of my playmates' countenances would chase away all sad thoughts of orphanage, and in those days no dreadful feeling of loneliness would creep in to chill and blight the tiny flowers of hope springing in my childlike heart, for I had friends kind and true, friends who sent me to school, and spared no pains to lustruct me in those branches which would be most useful to me through life. If I took a ramble through the streets I was obliged to write a description of what I saw. In fact all my wants were communicated to paper, and respect the addressed to my kind guardian, who corrected, altered, and amended to suit his peculiar views of composition. Thus passed away those days which constituted childhood with me. Was it a childhood? Can you call constant application to study, constant communion with mature minds childhood? No one even babbled "baby-talk" for my edification. My toys were the 1 ctures in the schoolbooks. True, I learned to play "bookev," and many a stolen hour did I devote to marbles, hall etc., but at home I heard n thing save a constant din about books.

Did I have a home? What is home? In my dr. ms I have made a home, where the tired stirit in it tra -w ere, when the door was and a world a ev u' and a world inclosed with n its part a home where innocent recreation and ple ant intercoure made like him. all will it y is me e dr n have such

'Tis useless to recall all the little mistakes I made, they are such as every print r's devil makes when learning the mystic art; a flice it to say that as time wore on I learned to set up and di tribute, to roll and o press, to lock and key forms, and to do a the practical printer possesses of obtaining general information. If he is a man of any intellect, and biessed with a tolerable memory, he cannot fall to learn a little of every art and science known to man. All that is beautiful, chaste, and sublime in language passes in review before him, while his eyes are allowed to read the innermost pages of the human heart No wonder Franklin became a philosopher. The printing office is a school of thilosophy. an academy of art and science. The poor boy, seeking to educate himself, cannot do better than enter with some good printer, and devote himself to that profession.

Through the glass of retrospection all things wear a different light; and, though I can now tell the advantages the printer's d vll may pos sess. I did not in those boy-days realize them; or, if I had, Mrs. Blow's energy and slovenliness would have driven all such ideas out of my head. Between the little lady and myself there was sworn antagonism. She didn'i like me, and she would take my Kentu ky notions out of my head, and she would let me know I wasn't too good to do jobs around the house. In time I upset her bleaching arrangements and disarranged her show-case, whenever I could do so without being detected. Old Blow pretended to like me, and let me do pretty much as I pleased about the bouse, until one unfor tunate morning Mrs. B. undertook to catch me with the intention of giving me a "thrashing," as she expressed herself. I ran through the back door and down the steps leading to the back yard. The little woman tried to follow, but slipped on the steps and fell headforemost into the yard. I heard her fall, and, turning to her, langhed heartly at her appearance. Just then Old Blow entered, and, as the "strandom" dawned upon him, he resolved to administent the whipping himself. He actually immed. He as the "situation" dawned upon him, he re-

quick succession, to all of which I answered [From the Little Rock (Ark.) Nulsual Democrat, Janthat I had left old Blow, and had walked all the way home. My aunt was kind-hearted, and Immediately had supper set. After which she sent me to bed, telling me that she lenew I needed rest. My guardian's surprise was great er, perhaps, than any of the family. He had r a ded Blow as an exempl r Christian and man of some talent, and he could not account for my conduct save on the ground that some thing dreadful had happened. A march of elghteen miles for a boy not eleven years old was a great undertaking, and the fact that I had made the march was a proof to his (my guardian's) mind that I possessed more self-will and reliance thau he had ever given me credit

With this nuderstanding he allowed me to remain at home for some mouths, making me resome my studies, however. My annt, who was disposed to be aristocratic, and who boasted her descent from royalty, was violently opposed to my "being apprenticed," and many a long acgument did she hold to prove that I would make a lawyer, and ought to be educated accordingly. My nnele, who was my guardian, on the other hand contended that I ought to learn a trade, in order to secure my judependence thr ugh life. Was his not a correct idea? All toys should learn a trade. Trade men and farmers alone are independent. A trade is a fortune and a crown. As a fortune, it is aiways in demand, and always gives value received for all it accumulates. It is a crown of indep inden c, and sits as lightly and gracefully upon the brow of the mechanic as the bejewelled crowns sit upon the heads of those whom the world call lu uarchs.

The next adventure or milestone in my career was really singular, as it shows how easily fortunes may be lost or won. An old me and conversed with me for several minutes at a time. I wondered at the old gentleman's conduct, but thought nothing particularly of it, until I was summoned to the parlor one day to meet a Mr. G who was a very wealthy map. I made my appearance promptly, and was a little surprised to meet my street acnair tance. He told me frankly that he wanted me to go home with him, and that I should be hi son, if I would. My uncle told me I might go if I wished, and I accordingly told the old gent that I would try his home, and see haw I

The next day found me domicled with Mr G. I spent the day in the house, and was well 11 ed with Mrs. (r., the only objection being that the was a Presbyterian of the strictest sect, and I was an old boy of eleven, with a will of my own-one which would not bend then, and has neither bent nor been broken sirce. A m nth pased away pleasantly enough, my ratrou not having regulred at my hands anything save that I should accom-1 by blm in his evening walks. He was a sage merchant, a very wise man; and the lectures he used to give me upon my duties in life were full of philosophy and plain, practical reason. He told me how he had seen men commeuce as errand boys and become great merchant, and then he would ask me if I did not wish to be a merchant. I often evaded this question, but, swered in the negative. If, said I, it were and have a fortune to speculate upon, I would trip e my means or lose all in a very short time. But, sir, to be a clerk-a poor, plodding machire, comiting units, tens, and hundredscrediting here and debting there-with no head ave that which belonged to my employer-with to soul, no heart, save that I figured on-why I would rather boot myself than know that such a life was destined for me. The merchant was shocked at my ideas of life, and, tinding that I would not probably be much credit to Lim as a protege, intimated to me one morning that I e intended sending me home. Not knowing what often e I had committed, I resolved that I would not go home. So I left the house and walked down town, ludying as to what I had better do. Saddenly the idea that I could set type presented itself, and in half an hour afterward I was busy in a job-office, working for twenty cents per thousand. I cugaged loard in a house down town, and determined to set up for myself and be independent. Mr. (4, having missed me, and find-

My uncle was surprised at my resolves, but let me have my way. He probably felt that his control over me was fast dving away-that the childboy was now a boy-man, and not to be checked only by severer measures than my kind old enardlan would have resorted to. My memories of this portion of my ilfc are memories of dark struggles in my own breast, of gloomy thoughts, resulting almost ln a upon every young man, whom I thought capable of being a rival of mine in the race for great many other neeful chores around the fame. Nothing pleased me. The sky was nevoffice. With one thing my bovish mind was or bright, and the sun never shone. > An Equine "Bary."—Did you ever see a rail-way station off duty? If you have merely missed a train, and been obliged to hang about a walt-ing-room for some hours, you have been blind-ed by disappointment, and have not seen the d by disappointment, and have not seen the ed by disappointment, and have not seen the quiet side of railway-station life. But all the interest of the establishment is gathered around a fine young chestnut mare, which pulls great sections of trains into contact, stepping aside just in time to avoid being caught between the carriages. Always at the right moment, her loving attendant leads her on one side with a "Come, my dear." The carriages crush together and are connied he carriages crash together, and are coupled; he throws the bridle over her neck, and walks back, the young man following him with her out the day, he tenderly saving her every five out the day, he tenderly saving her every five minntes from a violent death, trusting that In time she will learn to step aside herself when she nears a train with a heavy line of loaded wagons close upon her hocks. ALBERT PIKE.

HE FALL OF A MAN OF GENIUS

He (Albert Pike) wore his hair long, generally talling to his shoulders, or the coat collar, but not to his waist. His voice, for so large a man, was not very strong. In fact, it was deent, in that reject, for an orator. He was a remarkable man, as combining two haracters, almost essentially distinct. The of the "Hymns to the Gods," and so anthor of the "Hymns to the Gods," and some of the finest pieces of our poetry, would be plettered as a pale and melancholy man. Pike is large, robust, and as utilike a dreamy poet as possible. He had a keen appreciation of the beautiful. Some of his writings betray a delicacy that horders on sensitiveness, and some of his poems, more especially those he wrote and had published in a limited number of volumes, for distribution among his personal friends, were like some flowers whose exquisite aroma was scarcely perowers whose exquisite aroma was scarcely per-prible, except to the educated scuse. Yet like was sensous, if not a sensualist. He was ourse in some of his tastes. The man who detect the vintage year of fine wives by the taste, and whose gout was unquestionable, build drink his glass of Cincinnati whiskey, and rough it on the judicial circuit, as froutier lawyers had to do. The country was full of the of Pike, and of his doings lu the early his-tor, of the State. He was the compeer and as-sociate of a number of brilliant men, who have brilliant; desperate as well as glifted. Duels were common; street lights sometimes occurred, and insults ended in a fight. The only duel fought by Pike was with John S. Roane, afterwards Governor; a man with not much brains, but with a happy knick of miking the most of slender abilities. That grew out of some censure of Pitas's in relation to the conduct of Roane in the Mexican war, in which both were officers, and where, it was said. Roane showed the white feather. Rrane was the challenger. The duel came off on the souds opposite Fort Smith. Nether of the parties was wounded. Indeed, Pike was somewhat ighted, and it is doubtful If he could have gh he was editor here in stormy times lie was too large a man, physically, to be attacked with impunity; his personal courage was admitted, and then, we are inclined to

And this was the correction of any kind. And this was the first drait as he never rewrote such things. He knew exactly what to say, and how to say it. He wrote a good deal which was published. Till within the fast dozen years his poems were published at his expense, and a limited edition was distributed —at least he wrote neither for lame nor money.

Then he was fond of sporting. He hunted deer with the Indians on the Western prairies—he made one of a party to go morse-hunting in Northern New York. We would hear of him catching cod with Webster in Maserel in the great lakes, and we are not certain but he went with an expedition to hunt buffaloes on the plains. Of late years, that is, for number of years before the rebellion, he spent his winters in Wasbington, where he practised before the Supreme and other courts. There, he was known among the carele of wits, brilliant mer, and countyialists. There, the poet, the lawyer, the sportsman, and the hard student was well known as the high her and reveller. On the breaking out of the rebellion, Pike went litto it more as if driven in than going wildingly. He node a sprech here in the win-ter of 1860 before the Legislature, which por-traved the dangers of secession in vivid colors. When secession was resolved upon, he went with his adopted State—the was appointed by the convention a commissioner to the ludians. He wore a crimson plaid jacket, with full trowsers buttoned on; had a habit of whistling, and liked to ask questions; was accompanied by a small black dog. It is a long while now since he disappeared. I have a very pleasant honse, and much company. My guests say, "All? it is pleasant to be here. Everything has "Al! it is pleasant to be here. Everything has such an orderly, put-away look—nothing about under foot—no dirt." But my eyes are aching for the sight of whittlings and cut paper on the floor; of tumbled down card-houses; of woodfloor; of tumbled down card-houses; of wooden sheep and cattle; of pop-gins, bows and arrows, whips, tops, go-carts, blocks, and trumpery. I want to see crumbles on the carpet, and paste split on the kitchen table. I want to see the chairs and the tables turned the wrong way about. I want to see candy-making and coin-poppling, and to find jack-knives and fish-hooks among my muslins. Yet these things used to fret me once. They say, "How qulet you are here! or two it began to yield abundantly, and large, sound fruit. Now it is rare to find a poor apple in this orchard, as formerly it was to flud a good one.

Now why the change? The farmer attributes it to the sheep. He says the smell of the sheep and their presence drives off the borers and other insects. Have any of our subscribers had any such experience? If they have, please communicate it. If sheep prevent the ravages of those vernin, it is very important that the community know the fact, as our orchards should be pastured by sheep forthwith to save them and seeme their thritt. Who will try the experiment the coming season? experiment the coming season?
